Carnival vs. Mardi Gras: What's the difference?

One can last days or weeks. The other packs all the fun in a single day.

Carnival seasons in Venice, Italy, and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, are among the best known and most popular. There's also Cologne Karneval in Germany, Nice Carnaval in France, Oruro Carnival in Bolivia, Binche Carnaval in Belgium, Spain's Tenerife Carnaval in the Canary Islands, and festivities across the Caribbean—from Cuba to Trinidad and Tobago.

But only one place is known worldwide for Mardi Gras. That's New Orleans, home to the longest frolicking season that begins with Carnival and ends with the famed Mardi Gras. The difference in the celebrations lies in the details.

"The most important Carnivals across the world are in New Orleans, Rio and Venice," says Errol Laborde, a New Orleans-based Carnival and Mardi Gras historian. "Rio is more of a dance and parade kind of Carnival. Venice is more of a visual, costume kind of Carnival. Rio doesn't have throws like we do in New Orleans."

While all the events have their own special something, at the heart of the traditions is the celebration of life, simply having fun before the season of penitence under the Christian faith known as Lent.

"Carnival in Brazil and Mardi Gras in New Orleans are very different, but deep down they have the same essence," Andreza Trivillan, a native Brazilian travel blogger who has visited Louisiana's Carnival, explained in an email. "No accessories are thrown to the crowds. There is no typical Carnival food or drink in Brazil, unlike what happens with king cake in New Orleans."

Arthur Hardy, the founder of Arthur Hardy's Mardi Gras Guide, knows a thing or two about Carnival and Mardi

Gras. It burns him up when people—even people in New Orleans—confuse the two. "Carnival is a season. Mardi Gras is a day," says Hardy. The glossy, everything-youwant-to-know guide has published for 48 years with plenty of factoids and information about Louisiana balls, kings, queens, and other traditions.

The role of krewes

In New Orleans, there are Carnival organizations, known as krewes, that host formal balls, costume balls, parties, receptions, and parades. Some are super krewes. Others are mid-size krewes. Still others are sub-krewes. And there are micro-krewes. Some parades include specially built theme floats. Lots of parades have "throws," stuff float riders toss to paradegoers who like to collect whatever they can get their hands on, especially plastic beads and parade-specific items. The Krewe of Muses shares individually decorated women's high-heel shoes. The Krewe of Zulu no longer tosses their signature throw to prevent injuries: these days riders in this mostly Black krewe place hand-painted coconuts in the hands of revelers.

Carnival in New Orleans and elsewhere in Louisiana is longer than those other places because it is strictly tied to the Lenten season. It starts on January 6, Epiphany, the holiday that commemorates the day the three wise men or kings paid a visit to baby Jesus in Bethlehem offering gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh. Celebrations this year conclude with Mardi Gras on February 13, the day before Ash Wednesday, which marks the start of Lent, a day that changes from year to year. Carnival in New Orleans was 48 days last year. This year it's 38 days.

Businesses, street performers and vendors who count on Carnival to make a living don't like short Carnival seasons. It means less time to make money. Bakeries in New Orleans bake scrumptious king cakes with and without filling, all covered with traditional Mardi Gras colors— purple, green, and gold. One bakery might bake 500 king cakes a day. Five hundred cakes a day for two weeks is far different from the revenue they make during a month-long season.

"If you want to blame somebody for that, blame it on the pope," Hardy says with a laugh.

Fun packed into a single day

As Hardy says, Mardi Gras is a single day. It's always 47 days before Easter, so the Mardi Gras date changes with the church calendar. The day before is the next to last day of Carnival, Lundi Gras, or Fat Monday. Mardi Gras translates to Fat Tuesday. Some call it Shrove Tuesday. Most call it the Greatest Free Party on Earth, or the Greatest Free Show on Earth. The Mayor's Mardi Gras Advisory Council plans an official "parade season," designated by law as the 12 days before Mardi Gras.

Each year, paradegoers eagerly anticipate the krewe parade themes. Some always focus on fantasy. "Iris Travels the World." Some have celebrity kings or queens. Actor Kevin Dillon, of the movies Platoon and Entourage, is this year's king of the Krewe of Bacchus. Named after the one Egyptian queen nearly everyone knows, the Krewe of Nerfetti has a family parade with singer Tarriona Tank Ball of the musical group, Tank and the Bangas, as their queen. She'll lead their "Bloom Where You Are Planted" parade. Musicians Flo Rida and Sting aren't kings with the Krewe of Endymion, but they will perform at the glitzy Endymion extravaganza party attended by thousands.

There are Carnival activities across Louisiana. The Krewe of Hyacinthians rolls in Houma. The Baton Rouge region has its own set of parades, including the Mardi Paws Dog Parade, the Krewe of Spanish Town and the Krewe of Orion. Monroe and West Monroe paradegoers enjoy the Twin Cities's Krew de Riviere Mardi Gras Parade and the Krewe of Janus. People in Lafayette give a nod to Carnival elsewhere with the Krewe of Carnivale en Rio Mardi Gras Parade and the Krewe of Canailles—loosely translated as the Krewe of Scoundrels—intended to welcome the riffraff, the masses, anybody and everybody.

Everyone knows it's an important part of the culture. It's also big business.

Economic impact

A recent economic impact study prepared by New Orleans and Company, the mayor's advisory council, and Tulane University shows tremendous impact on the City of New Orleans and the State of Louisiana. There's a direct and indirect impact on the city of $891,202,780 and a net fiscal benefit of $28 million. The state gets about $14 million in taxes.

"Compared to any other event, here or elsewhere, there's no other event like Carnival," says Kelly Schulz, senior vice president for communications and public relations at New Orleans & Company. "It's unreal that we can do this every year. It's a masterful execution ... It's the best and most complex event we have."

There's a saying in New Orleans that captures the season: Laissez les bons temps rouler! — Let the good times roll!

Shake, rattle for dough

Mariah Hill – With a loud clack of wooden rattlers, a group of altar servers from Mary Help of Christians Catholic Church continued a decades-old tradition of egg rattling Saturday morning.

More than a dozen servers, divided into three groups, went from home to home spinning the wooden rattlers.

Each home owner knew exactly what the rattle-wielding altar servers were after.

"You lay your money out the night before," said Ruthie Koenig, who walked to the door holder her dog, Rusty, and money for the kids.

"They really give us a lot during the year," she said of the dedicated servers.

The kids said it is an opportunity to be with their friends, ride their bikes and raise a little money. The money is used for trips for the servers, and they also were given some cash to spend at the summer picnic.

"We usually go 13 miles," Eric Kern, 16 said.

His group usually makes it almost to Santa Claus and has been out as long as six hour before. Others, especially those who stay a little closer to town, are usually done in three or four hours.

Matt Kern and cousin Valerie Kern, both 19, are too old to be altar servers, but they still enjoy the tradition and went out Saturday.

Their visit to the home of Louie and Vernida Jochim revealed that the annual event goes back nearly a century. Louie, 82, who has lived in Mariah Hill all his life, remembers egg rattling in the mid-1930s. It was already an entrenched tradition at that time, he said.

Back then it was all done on foot. Other than that, very little has changed except maybe "the amount of money," Vernida said.

A quarter was the norm and a dollar was rare back then. Last year, the servers gathered nearly $500.

Some of the rattlers have been used for years and the newer ones are patterned after the older ones.

Each handmade rattler consists of a slotted wheel. A thin piece of wood smacks on the grooves when it is spun around and produces a very loud noise.

LeRoy Dilger, who grew up in Mariah Hill and now lives in Evansville, recently gave his rattler to one of his nephews. He wrote down the meaning and purpose of the custom and attached it to the rattler so it would not get lost.

He was an altar server from 1944 to 1951. He told The Herald by e-mail that the servers used to receive eggs that they would sell and the money was given to the pastor and then used at the picnic. The donation of eggs turned into just a monetary donation but the tradition kept is name of egg rattling.

Bobby Gogel, 75, also remembers going egg rattling in the 1940s and those seeking donations say a phrase in German. He remembers it to this day.

Translations very but the key elements of the phrase are always the same. "We have watched the entire night, this holy Easter grave, for three dozen eggs or 6 pounds of bacon, or we'll not leave this house."

It is hard to say exactly how old this tradition is, or exactly where it came from.

Father Bill Dietsch, pastor at Mary, Help of Christians, has a few ideas. Until 1979 the parish was served by Benedictine priests from Saint Meinrad Archabbey. The German Benedictines brought some customs with them. This was probably one of them.

Erika Brady, professor of folk studies at Western Kentucky University, has never heard of this specific custom but said it is in line with many mendicant, or begging, customs. The most common of these traditions is trick-or-treating on Halloween.

All of these types of customs usually have certain similarities, one being a reversal of roles. Altar servers usually don't go out to beg for money. It often involves some kind of saying or phrase and it is almost always connected to a certain event or day.

The rattlers also speak to a tradition in the Catholic Church.

Between Holy Thursday and Easter, the church bells aren't used and songs are sung a cappella. Fr. Dietsch remembers prior to the 1960s a wooden clacker was used during Mass to symbolize the sadness of the death of Christ.

He believes that may be how the rattlers factored in.

Ray Kern participated in egg rattling in the late 1960s. On Saturday, four of his and wife Sylvia's eight children – Valerie, Eric, Kevin, 15, and Emily, 12 – carried on the tradition.

As Valerie and her group canvassed town they ran into Brian Peters, 35, Lamar, who was out reading meters. He grew up in St. Meinrad and also went egg rattling.

He gave them a couple of bucks and shared with them the saying he and his friends used to recite: "We are the altar boys. We come to bring you Easter joy."

They then asked for food, candy or any donation – and if a contribution wasn't forthcoming, "We'll rattle, rattle, rattle until your ears ring."

Let's keep the interaction up with members. Take time to visit people at other tables. Introduce yourself to others that you don't know.

On March 20, the German Club meetings will return to the Moose. Just a reminder that we need to get back into our groove and remember to bring a dessert of salad. Kent Yeager from the Indiana Barn Foundation will present information about Historic Barns in Indiana.

On April 17, the activity after dinner will be game night. Already had requests for card games: Sheepshead, Cinch, Euchre, and Hand & Foot. If you don't want to play cards, bring a board game or plan to just sit back and relax with your friends. We will have small prizes for each table winner. The real win for the evening is a night of fun and frivolity with members.

Survey on the cultural influence of German immigration

Dear readers of the Deutscher Verein newsletter, my name is Leopold Schaffner and I am based at the University of Passau in Bavaria, Germany. I had the pleasure to visit Dubois County several times during the last years, as my family has close friends there.

As a student of International Culture and Business Studies, I was always amazed by the extraordinary amount of Germanness found in Jasper and its surroundings. This, among many great conversations with the locals about their past, sparked my interest to write my bachelor thesis about Dubois County with the goal of documenting the influence of German ancestry in contemporary cultural life.

If you are willing to participate in my project by filling out the survey questions below, it would be greatly appreciated. Thank you so much!

- 1. Are you currently a resident of Dubois County, Indiana? (Yes / No)
- 2. What age group are you? 1 (20 and below), 2 (21-35), 3 (36-50), 4 (51-65), 5 (65 and above)
- 3. Are you an American citizen of German ancestry? (Yes / No)
- 4. How important is a sense of belonging to your German ethnic group? 1 (not at all important), 2 (somewhat important), 3 (relatively important), 4 (very important), 5 (extremely important)
- 5. Does the fact that you are of German descent have a cultural impact on you? (Yes / No)
- 6. Has your family passed on German American traditions? (Provide an example if possible.)
- 7. Which of your any of your ancestors spoke German? (Provide an example if possible.)
- 8. Do you still speak any German? (Yes / No)
- 9. If so, on what level? Fluent, intermediate, basic, certain elements (numbers, greetings, descriptive nouns) or provide an example.

Please E-Mail your answers back to leopold.schaffner@outlook.com. If you are from Dubois County and interested in being interviewed about being German American, please reach out as well!
